What is an apprenticeship?

An apprenticeship is a development programme that combines employment and training in a specific skill or discipline. On completion of a programme the apprentice is awarded an Apprenticeship Certificate. Apprenticeships are suitable for anyone above the age of 16, who is seeking to develop a new skill set whilst in employment and are available in most sectors and occupations.

How does an apprenticeship work?

Apprentices are employed to do a real job while studying for a formal qualification, usually for one day a week either at college or within your workplace. By the end of the apprenticeship, they will have gained the skills and knowledge needed to either succeed in their chosen career or progress onto the next apprenticeship level.

Even if qualifications are not part of the standard, our business development associates will discuss any skills you wish the apprentice to develop as part of the commitment statement with you.

All apprentices will need to participate in English and maths development and achieve up to Level 2 Functional Skills depending on the level of apprenticeship.

Apprentices are required to spend a minimum of 20% of their paid time in off-the-job training, which is defined as learning undertaken outside of the normal day-to-day working environment and leads towards the achievement of the apprenticeship. We will work with the apprentice and the workplace mentor to define what is acceptable as off-the-job training.

“It’s local to my house, the facilities are good and its a good place to start your career’.
